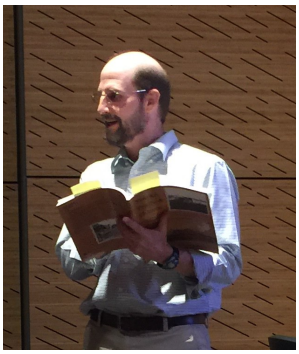
2017 Fall Program



Dr. Jack Deibert

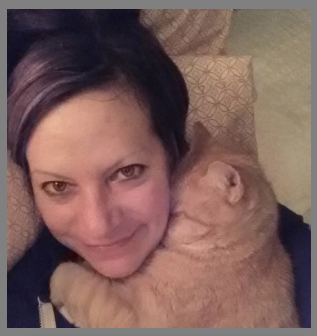
The Fall Program took place in the new Art + Design building, and featured Dr. Jack Deibert, Professor of Geology at APSU and author of Tracks, Trails, and Thieves: The Adventures, Discoveries, and Historical Significance of Ferdinand V. Hayden's 1868 Geological Survey of Wyoming and Adjacent Territories.

Dr. Deibert's book focuses on Hayden's adventures that took place during the building of the transcontinental railroad. As a result, Hayden, the "Geologic Forrest Gump," met famous Civil War generals, railroad executives, politicians, photographers, other prominent geologists, and thieves. Dr. Deibert's presentation included photographs, a timeline of events, and an animated retelling of Hayden's encounter with an "organized band of thieves." If you are interested in more information about Ferdinand Hayden, you can find Tracks, Trails, and Thieves at the Woodward Library.

Staff Spotlight

Scott Shumate

Scott is a Clarksville native who earned his bachelor's degree in computer science and information technology here at Austin Peay. He is currently the IT analyst for the Woodward Library's digital services unit where he maintains the Digital Library and Veterans' Oral History websites, supports and maintains APSU's institutional repository software, and manages the Woodward Library Society web pages. In his spare time, he continues coding, programming, and tinkering with computers. He also enjoys watching soccer and UT football and reading science fiction. Scott is currently pursuing a master's degree in information sciences at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville.



Tina Reid

Tina earned her bachelor's degree in psychology from Emory and Henry College. She started working at the Woodward Library in 2016 and provides customer service at the Circulation Desk where she also maintains user accounts, assists patrons in locating materials, and helps maintain the library's print collections. In her spare time, Tina enjoys vegan food, wine, camping, gardening, and travel. She is an animal rights activist and serves as a board member for Nashville Animal Advocacy. She has seven rescued cats, who manage to live peacefully together in her tiny house in the woods. Tina is attending the University of Tennessee at Knoxville where she is pursuing a degree in information sciences.
