Spring Social 2022

Thank you to everyone who joined us at the Fortera Stadium for the Society Social in April! It was the first spring event in more than two years, and we were delighted to see more than sixty Society members and friends in attendance. A good time was had by all.

The basket auction was a huge success! Thirteen baskets were auctioned off, and there was fierce competition between many of the bidders. When the dust settled, the Society raised $1720 that will go toward funding online databases.

The premier presentation featured Minoa Uffelman, Ellen Kanervo, and Phyllis Smith discussing their book The Diary of Serepta Jordan: A Southern Woman's Struggle with War and Family, 1857-1864. The presenters took turns recounting historical events and the life of Serepta "Rep" Jordan here in Clarksville.

It was nice to see so many smiling faces at the Society Social, and we look forward to bringing you more events in the future.

Women Making History: The 19th Amendment Book

The next presentation in the Let's Talk About It (LTAI): Women's Suffrage grant program will be on Thursday, May 19 at 5 p.m. Facilitators Dr. Jessica Blake and Dr. Jill Eichhorn will lead the discussion about Women Making History: The 19th Amendment Book, essays compiled by the National Park Service. The event will take place at the Office of Equity, Access and Inclusion (OEAI), located at 416 College St., and is free and open to the public.

For more information about the upcoming programs, visit the Let's Talk About It: Women's Suffrage LibGuide, or contact Program Coordinator, Jenny Harris, at 931-221-7914 or harrisj@apsu.edu.

Director Spotlight

Joe with his granddaughters Thea and Sawyer Rose (standing)

Joe Weber grew up in Harbor Springs, Michigan, a small resort town on northern Lake Michigan. He has also lived in New Mexico, Kentucky, and Virginia. Joe earned a B.S. in Education in 1977 and an M.A. in Educational Administration in 1980 from Central Michigan University. In 1992, he earned an M.S. in Library Science from the University of Kentucky. Before he became an academic librarian, he sold high-end camera equipment and fine jewelry, and was certified as a diamond appraiser by the Gemological Institute of America. Joe moved to Clarksville in July of 2007, when he accepted the position of Director of Library Services at the Woodward Library. Joe's responsibilities include providing leadership for visioning, planning, and resource development and allocation, and overseeing a staff and faculty of 25 full-time employees. When he is not at the Library, Joe enjoys golfing, reading, and photography. He has a new digital SLR camera that he wants to learn to use. After working in higher education for 30 years, Joe is looking forward to retiring in July.

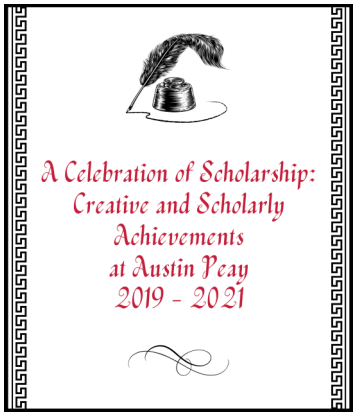
Maus Display

In January, the McMinn County Board of Education here in Tennessee voted to ban Art Spiegelman's Pulitzer Prize-winning graphic novel Maus, despite its historical and educational significance. There is a display on the main floor of the Woodward Library that includes the Board of Education's meeting minutes and articles about the public's response to the book banning.

Celebration of Scholarship Virtual Display

If you didn't get a chance to visit the Library to see the Celebration of Scholarship display, we have a virtual display you can view! You'll find a video of the event presentations, links to some of the published articles, and photos of the display.



Visit the Celebration of Scholarship LibGuide for more information.
